FREE CHEAT SHEET · FOR LISTING AGENTS

Five pricing objections, answered.

The same five come up in almost every listing appointment. Here is what is usually behind each one, a line you can say, and what to have on the page before you walk in.

1 "But Zillow says it's worth more."

The seller isn't wrong to look. An automated value is built from records, not a walkthrough. It can't see condition, updates, or layout, and it doesn't choose comps the way a buyer will.

> SAY "Zillow is a fair starting point. Here it is next to the sales buyers will actually compare your home to, and here's what it doesn't adjust for."

Have ready: the automated value shown beside your comp grid, with the gaps named.

2 "Let's list high. We can always come down."

The fear is leaving money on the table. Your answer is the listings that already tried it. Cancelled and expired homes above your range show where buyers stopped.

> SAY "These homes started where you want to start. Here's what happened to them. That's where the ceiling is."

Have ready: cancelled and expired listings near the subject, with list price and days on market.

3 "My neighbor sold for more."

One sale feels like proof. Ask which house, then put it on the table with the others. If it was a good match, it's already in your range. If not, show the reason.

> SAY "Which one? Let's look at it together." Then show size, condition, lot, and sale date side by side.

Have ready: every nearby sale marked Used or Not used, with a one-line reason.

4 "Another agent said higher."

Don't argue with a number you haven't seen. A price with no comps behind it can't be checked. Yours can.

> SAY "That's worth comparing. Ask them which sales they used. Mine are all here, with every adjustment shown."

Have ready: a line-item adjustment grid where every adjustment has a stated basis.

5 "We need this number."

This is usually about a next home, a payoff, or a family decision, not the market. Acknowledge the need first, then separate it from what buyers will pay.

> SAY "I hear that. Let's look at what moves the price toward the top of the range, and what the market supports today, so you can decide with both in front of you."

Have ready: what would move the price to either end of the range, and when you'll review it after listing.

Walk in with the price already defended.
